The Canny Scot's Sense of Humor.
The reason a Scot does not laugh at a joke right away, says Dean Ramsay, is not—as is the popular fiction—that he is "slow in the uptake," but that the canny man will not commit himself. He must think it over before he donates the exact amount of laughter which the joke deserves. The Scot minister, who is Scotland's common public speaker, is aware—consciously or instinctively—of this trait, and his delivery of an anecdote with a point is a thing of unique art.

One Thing Beyond Any Power.
Tip knows other places where traveling is of the agony brand. After waiting for nearly four hours in Shanville, Canada, between Toronto and Montreal, for a "mixed"—if freight cars and one coach—I asked an impatient clergyman if he had been able to learn when the train would arrive. He eyed me up and down with pity. "Sir," he said, "that is the only thing that the Almighty does not know."—New York Press.

When Not to Wash the Face.
"Never, never," warns a beauty specialist who is engaged in an effort to raise the level of good looks among St. Louis women, "wash the face while traveling." It will make for a truer democracy when the practice of the belle in the Pullman stateroom and the gentleman who rides the tracks shall be one and the same in this important particular.—St. Louis Republic.

Bird Sanctuary in Town Common.
The growth of the garden city, Litchworth, threatens to drive birds to more secluded spots. To prevent this the directors propose to convert Norton Common, in the center of the town, into a bird sanctuary. Here weeds, grasses, berries and fruits of various kinds which are pleasing to birds will be cultivated and part of the common will be fenced in for nesting.—London Daily Mail.

Character and Eccentricity.
Eccentricity has always abounded when and where strength of character has abounded; and the amount of eccentricity in a society has been proportional to the amount of genius, mental vigor and moral courage it contained. That so few now dare to be eccentric marks the chief danger of the time.—John Stuart Mill.

High and Low Wages in France.
The highest paid workwomen in France are said to be the cutters of precious stones. They receive about $1.80 a day. The lowest wage is 60 cents a day, and is paid to dressmakers. There are 14,000,000 women in France, and the majority of them earn their own living.

DR. JOHN HUNTER SPEAKS.

Meriden Clergymen Advised to Be Frank and True in Their Utterances of Truth.

Ten members of the Meriden Ministers' Association and two laymen formed the small but keenly interested audience that Dr. John Hunter of Glasgow, Scotland, addressed before he left for Bridgeport after a pleasant stay of over two days in Meriden. His subject was Religious Conditions in Great Britain.

He said the church did not believe too much but too many things. He thinks the churches ought to simplify their articles of faith. Above all things he believes that a church cannot exist long where the members are asked to say with the lips, subscribe to certain things they do not believe. The clergy should be frank and true in their utterance of truth. Speaking of church unity he argued that there was no reason why the Congregational and Baptist church of Great Britain should not be one religious body. High minded men over there and men of the same type here stand ready to further this plan of unity. In fact, to bring it to pass when the time is ripe. In comparison with these large minded men are little pettifogging fellows whose fighting blood was roused over trivial non-essentials of the law that did not amount to anything. Speaking of the covenant he said it ought to be simple and Christians should believe simply with the mind of Christ. He held belief in the holy catholic church and the communion of saints as necessary.

He told the clergymen that sometimes he was moved to believe that the true Christianity was without the church. People meet everywhere else in various places of employment or in a social and business way on an equal square and face basis, but at the communion table exceptions are made of those not identified with my denomination or your denomination.—Meriden Record.

Chronic.
"Away down in her heart," said the boarding house philosopher, "every woman is a pessimist. When any calamity happens she always wants to know the worst, and isn't happy until she hears it."

See?
And yet, figuring it in any way you want to, what every woman knows isn't much as compared with what nearly every man owes.—Indianapolis News.

In Praise of Philosophy.
Philosophy is the law and art of life, and it teaches us what to do in all cases, and, like good marksmen, to hit the white at any distance.—Seneca.

"That Turneth Away Wrath."
Mrs. Sharp—"So you told Mr. Jones you wished you were single once more, did you?" Sharp (with quick wit)—"Only that I might have the happiness of marrying you over again, darling."

Hard Work of Colombian Women.
Half of Colombia's miners are women, working in the hydraulic operations, up to their waists in water, beside the men.

ROAST PIG.

One New Britain Family Had Ham, a la Charles Lamb, for Sunday Dinner, Because of Kilbourne Fire.

Few persons who relish porcine flesh ever get an opportunity to eat any in the original style as described by the English literary light, Charles Lamb, in his "Essay on Roast Pig," says the New Britain Herald.

The "great discovery" of roast pig as recorded by the voracious Charles, it will be recalled, was purely accidental and the result of a fire at a barn in which pigs were kept by a wise Chinese. One family in this city had ham in that style for Sunday dinner. E. O. Kilbourne's fine barn in Stanley quarter cooked the pig and the expense of furnishing the dinner was just about $1.00.

The barn caught fire in some unknown manner Saturday night and an alarm was sent in through box 46. The fire was beyond control when the department arrived. Several farming implements and vehicles were destroyed. Two wagons belonging to J. J. Donohue were burned. Two pigs were kept in the barn and one of the porkers met his fate in the fire. He was taken out after the fire was discovered, but he was badly scorched at the time and Alden Andrews was called upon to put the pig out of misery. The animal's throat was cut and it was left on the ground near the barn. When Mr. Kilbourne went out Sunday morning to look over the ruins he found that some one had visited the place during the night and had taken a few choice cuts off the roast pig. One of the big hams was cut off and there was sufficient roast pork taken in all to feed a large family.

The Mischief Maker.
Is the German emperor ready to play once more the part of mischief maker in Europe? It is difficult to understand on any other theory why Germany should so suddenly decide that her rights were insufficiently guarded by the Anglo-Russian convention of 1907.

Doubtless that does represent an obstacle to some of the emperor's ambitious designs in the east. While it left the authority of the shah technically untouched, the division of Persia into "spheres of influence," Russian and British, respectively, was a practical confession that the independence of the country was gone. There was much opposition to the convention in Great Britain, the critics of the government pointed out that all Northern Persia has been surrendered to Russia, that the Caspian Sea has become a Russian lake, and that Russia would now have the opportunity to make at her leisure an advance upon the British dominions in India. The British sphere of influence in southeastern Persia, it was said, was no compensation for this concession; in fact, control of it left the strategic position of Great Britain no whit improved. All of this is true, in a sense. But Great Britain had either to acknowledge Russia's superior influence over Northern Persia or fight against it. The government was probably right in thinking that the game was not worth the candle. How far the Anglo-Russian convention has threatened the interests of other countries it might be somewhat difficult to decide. Germany evidently feels, just as in the case of Morocco, that she can possibly get more for herself by making a disturbance. It is a dangerous expedient; whether it will turn out to be worth while remains to be seen.—Providence Journal.
